Chapter 392: The Fall of the Watchers Beyond Time

The Silent Fury

In the aftermath of the clash, Sung Jin-Woo stood alone. The Watchers Beyond Time, once revered as the omnipotent overseers of existence, had been driven into retreat. But Sung Jin-Woo, the True Absolute One, would not allow their presence to linger, even in the most fleeting form. The threat they posed, despite their withdrawal, was far too great to be ignored.

The air in the True Absolute One Domain Realm grew thick with anticipation. Sung Jin-Woo's wings, 60 million in number, spread out across the vast expanse of his realm. His power surged, the very essence of the True Absolute One emanating in waves. In his hands, he grasped a set of divine tools—artifacts crafted from the very fabric of reality itself, designed to sever the influence of beings who existed beyond the realm of time.

He had no need for armies, no need for legions of soldiers or allies. This battle would be fought alone. The Watchers Beyond Time, despite their immense power, had underestimated the will of Sung Jin-Woo.

The Divine Tools

The divine tools he wielded were not of this world. They were forged in the heart of the True Absolute One Domain Realm, crafted from the laws of reality itself. These tools were capable of bending space, breaking time, and severing the ties that bound beings to existence.

Among the divine tools were:

The Blade of Eternity: A sword forged from the essence of time itself. It could cut through the very concept of existence, erasing what was and what would be.

The Hammer of Oblivion: A massive war hammer that could strike at the core of reality, crushing everything in its path.

The Chain of Fate: A chain that could bind even the most powerful beings to a singular moment, forcing them to face their inevitable end.

The Heart of the Void: A dark crystal that absorbed the essence of any being it touched, nullifying their power and sealing their existence.

The Destruction of the Watchers

With these tools in hand, Sung Jin-Woo launched his counterattack.

The first target was the Watcher of Time, the being who had once bent the flow of time to its will. Sung Jin-Woo swung the Blade of Eternity, and in an instant, the Watcher's form was severed from existence. Time itself seemed to fracture, and the Watcher’s essence was erased from the multiverse, its being reduced to nothing. There was no trace left of its existence, its power absorbed by Sung Jin-Woo.

Next came the Watcher of Space, a being who held dominion over all spatial constructs. The Hammer of Oblivion descended like a thunderstrike, shattering the very fabric of space around the Watcher. The Watcher's form unraveled, its essence absorbed by the True Absolute One, its powers fading into the vastness of nothingness.

The Watcher of Creation, a being that held the power to reshape and give life to the multiverse, was the next to fall. Sung Jin-Woo used the Chain of Fate to bind the Watcher to a singular moment—its final breath. The Watcher's attempts to reshape reality faltered as the chain tightened, and the essence of creation was snuffed out with a single blow from the Blade of Eternity.

Finally, the Watcher of Destruction, a being whose very existence was a force of annihilation, was struck with the Heart of the Void. As the dark crystal made contact with the Watcher's form, it absorbed the Watcher's essence, nullifying its destructive powers. The Watcher, the embodiment of destruction itself, was sealed within the void, its power absorbed into Sung Jin-Woo, who stood triumphant.

The Aftermath

With the last of the Watchers Beyond Time destroyed, the multiverse was left in stunned silence. Sung Jin-Woo stood alone amidst the remnants of his enemies. The divine tools, their purpose fulfilled, began to fade back into the ether. The Watcher of Time, the Watcher of Space, the Watcher of Creation, and the Watcher of Destruction—all of them were annihilated, their essence now part of the True Absolute One.

The Divine Triad's reign was now unchallenged. The True Absolute One, with the essence of the Watchers absorbed into his being, had become even more powerful. The very fabric of existence trembled before him, for Sung Jin-Woo was no longer just a god. He was the force that governed the multiverse itself.

The corpses of the Watchers, their once-great forms now reduced to nothingness, were collected by Sung Jin-Woo. They were remnants of a past that could no longer hold sway over the multiverse. Their belongings, the relics they had once used to manipulate time, space, creation, and destruction, were now in Sung Jin-Woo's possession. They would serve as reminders of the power he had wielded to eliminate them.

The Absorption

As the essence of the Watchers was absorbed into his being, Sung Jin-Woo felt a surge of power like never before. His already vast strength multiplied, and his connection to the multiverse deepened. He could feel the pulse of the cosmos in his veins, the threads of time and space dancing to his will.

No longer bound by the limitations of time or space, Sung Jin-Woo stood as the ultimate being. His influence spread across every timeline, every dimension, and every universe. The multiverse was his to shape, his to protect, and his to rule.

He had become more than a god. He had become the very essence of existence itself.
